

My life was full of questions

Ellah de Jesus

People around me, such as my classmates and my friends, see me as a good person even before I came to know Christ as Lord and Savior. Maybe, it is because they knew that I am a silent type of person and I never had any quarrels before and I try to help other people to the best that I can and whenever possible. I never had any vices. Maybe they haven't heard bad words from me or because they usually see me going to church every Sunday, to the religion that I was before. I even attended other activities related to the church.

But my life was full of questions, questions that I could not answer. I find some of my beliefs questionable. Why is there such a thing as Rosary and where did it come from? Does the Bible tell anything about Rosary? Does it tell anything about praying to Mary or what they teach to us about saints? Even if I do these things, I always ask myself, doubting. I never felt secure.

What I have wondered about most is that I was kind and willing to help other people but I could not do these in our home. Though I always go to church, I never changed and was even getting worse. Even if I really wanted a change, nothing happened. I cried every night. I got tired of everything. I have tried every religion but there was still no answer.

One day, I was invited by my cousin to attend a Youth Fellowship of Novaliches Christian Fellowship Main. I was amazed that even if they were many, they knew each other well, something that I never saw in my old church. I continued to attend services and gatherings.

Then came Daily Vacation Bible School or DVBS. I learned about the truth of Jesus Christ's death on the cross. It wasn't so clear to me at first, but as I attended Sunday services, I understood the real meaning and significance of Christ's sacrifice, that He died for me to pay for my sins. My questions in life were answered and the Lord caused me to grow, changing my life gradually. I learned to obey my parents, which I couldn't do before. I know God is working in my life just like the same way He is working in you.
