

Luke's 2nd: Twice As Much Fun

April 12, 2009 was no ordinary Easter Sunday for the Baldonado family as they celebrated Luke's 2nd birthday at NCF. It was a party that meant a lot to both Mimi Dang and Dada Jay, also the proud parents to elder Matthew, who gave a fantastic treat to the beneficiaries of our feeding program.

Lively singing courtesy of Sis. Del Gagto opened up the celebration, after which was a film entitled, "When the Messiah Comes." The 88 kids in attendance were then treated to a sumptuous meal of spaghetti, cake, corn dogs, and chocolate cupcakes lovingly-baked by "Mama Inday", as they would fondly call Grandmom Marilyn Baldonado.

Of the five games played, the party-stopper was "Blow the Cotton Ball Off Your Nose". The whole house burst into laughter seeing the kids rather oblivious that they were making funny faces as they raced to remove the cotton ball from their noses by vigorous blowing.

The kids from NCF Banaba also rendered a special song number with the tenor that Jesus was to them, greater than Batman or Superman, or any other superhero on earth.

All the children had a lot to take home as each party bag contained candies, biscuits, lollipops and chocolates, in addition to those who won backpacks for being able to recite a memory verse, and other prizes.

When asked what made this celebration different from the other parties they have hosted, Mimi Dang had this to say: "This is our small way of thanking the Lord for all the love and blessings He has showered to our family. Like Matt, Luke is so blessed. We have to share God's goodness to others. He has been so great to us."

Looks like they hit the bullseye.
